Herelam is a simple contact tracking web application. As per the Ministry of Health guidelines, Herelam collects:

- date
- time
- full name
- address
- phone
- email address

This is stored on a database which is not accessible to the workers of the establishment where the data has been captured.

The process (shown on the right) is:

1. A client scans a QR code which is unique to the business
2. The client fills out the required information

When the client leaves, they either scan a “leaving” QR code or they click the “leave” icon on the page (shown below)

The screenshot shows a mobile application interface for a 'Contact Register'. At the top is a location pin icon. Below it is the title 'Contact Register'. There are five input fields: 'Full Name', 'eMail', 'Your phone number', 'Your home address', and 'Visiting someone?'. Below the 'Visiting someone?' field is a small square checkbox. Underneath the checkbox is the text: 'I declare that I have not: arrived in NZ in the last 14 days, been in contact with someone with COVID-19, Had any COVID-19 symptoms'. Below this text is a circular button with a right-pointing arrow. At the bottom of the form is a disclaimer: 'This information may be used for COVID-19 contact tracing purposes and will be retained for at least 2 months. The information you provide may be supplied to Worksafe and/or the Ministry of Health. You may request a copy of your information, and correct any information you provide, at any time.' At the very bottom, it says 'Icons made by Freepik from www.flaticon.com'.

Guest registration

Herelam also allows registration of “Guests” for those people who do not have data or a phone.

To use this, a Guest code is scanned and data is entered “on behalf” of the Guest.

When the Guest leaves, they are “de-registered” on their behalf as shown below
